

Transforming Core Business Operations Across the Globe

Case Study

International Consultancy company uses BusinessOptix to transform core business operations

An international consultancy company wanted to transform the way it thought about and delivered its Financial, HR and IT operations. Particular focus was put on professionalizing the definition and delivery of operational processes across multiple geographies. The company also focused on moving away from Visio and a number of home-grown solutions to a single, collaborative and intuitive platform as these delivery methods were costing time and effort and leading to inconsistent delivery approaches.

Using BusinessOptix as its strategic process modeling platform, they imported existing Visio processes to be used as the baseline for the to-be processes that included process descriptions, compliance and risk checks, links to existing guides and surrounding systems (HR platform), and data checks (in preparation for their GDPR initiative). They also created standard operating procedures and work instructions to support internal users as part of the processes.

With over 300 processes added to BusinessOptix, the consultancy has been able to create the foundations on which to build standardization, process excellence and new collaborative ways of working. All of which enables the consultancy company to eliminate duplication, deliver best practice across the organization and improve the effectiveness of its teams.
